

In a follow up to our Lenten series, "White Privilege: Let's Talk," we are beginning a new series titled "Sacred Conversations on Race." The initial conversation will be held on Sunday, November 5, 2017, at 4:00 p.m., at the Rutherford Congregational Church, 251 Union Avenue, Rutherford, NJ.

Our first speaker will be Professor Carol Walker Manigault of Felician University. Professor Manigault will share a look into what it was like growing up in this country before the Civil Rights laws were passed, and what it has been like since. She will also share a few stories about her family with everyone, to help put things into perspective about how very recently it was that the laws were so different.

Light refreshments will be served following Professor Manigault's talk.

This "Sacred Conversations on Race" series is an opportunity for deep listening to the experiences and stories of persons of color. So often we isolate and insulate ourselves from the reality of those who have to live under the thumb of structural racism, white supremacy, and experience the ugly side of individual and societal prejudice and bigotry. Only when we open ourselves to the reality of others' lived experience can we fully comprehend the urgent need for our action to end the attitudes, behaviors, and policies that undergird the culture and society in which we live.
